Have you ever worked as a volunteer? Volunteers don't get paid for what they do, but the experience of helping others can be more valuable than 56. There are many charities (慈善机构) around the world. There are always in need of volunteers who want to make a difference.

Do you want to 57 a volunteer? Think about what skills you have? If you speak more than one language or you are good at 58 things, you can find places to use your skills to help other people.

Volunteering doesn't always mean doing great things. You can start with 59 things. There is a famous saying that goes, "Charity begins at home". If people help those around them, 60 will be in trouble. There are always people in your neighborhood who need help 61 some tasks, such as walking their dogs, looking after their kids, and carrying their heavy shopping bags. You can also volunteer by giving 62 to hospitals. These things may seem small, but they can still make a difference in someone else's life.

Volunteers don't 63 help people. Environmental volunteers work hard to protect the environment. They plant trees or 64 city parks. Other volunteers work for animal charities which save the homeless or injured (受伤的) animals. They feed the animals and show them love. They take care of the animals until they are 65 enough to be put in good homes.

All in all, volunteering is really a good way to make a contribution to your hometown and to the world.

Once upon a time, there was a young man. He lived in a small village. He was the only child in his family. So his parents loved him very much and did everything for him. He just hung out every day, doing nothing.

One day, he met an old man in his village. The old man asked him, "My boy, why don't you work hard to achieve something when you are young?"

The young man replied without care, "Why do I have to be in a hurry? I'm young, so I have plenty of time! Besides, I haven't made any plans for my future yet."

"Time waits for no man!" the old man said. Then he asked the young man to go into a dark house with him.

"I can't see anything!" the young man said.

The old man lit a match and said to the young man, "Before the match goes out, pick something in the house as you like."

By the weak light, the young man tried to see the things in it. But before he found something, the match went out, and the house became dark again at once.

"Before I could get something, the match had gone out," the young man said angrily.

The old man said, "My boy, your youth (青春) is like the burning match, which can only last for a short time. So you shouldn't waste your time!"

Nowadays, we are having a much busier life, and we are using our eyes more than ever before. So we often have tired eyes after a day's work or study. Here are some good methods of protecting eyes against tiredness to keep them healthy.

POSTURE (坐姿)

Get into the habit of paying attention to the way you sit. Try to stick to the proper posture that doctors suggest.

HELPFUL PICTURES

There are some special pictures online that can help relax your eyes. You may download such pictures to your computer or smartphone. When there is nothing far away you can look at to relax your eyes, you can use one of these pictures. A picture with something like a tunnel (隧道) in it is quite popular. Try to look as far into the tunnel as you can for 30 seconds (秒). Do you feel better?

BREAKS

The 20-20-20 rule: take a break from the screen every 20 minutes for 20 seconds and look at something 20 feet (about 6 meters) away.

EYE EXERCISES

Step 1. Sitting comfortably, imagine there is a clock in front of you and turn your eyes up to 12 o'clock. Pause (停顿) for a second, and then lower your eyes to 6 o'clock. Pause again, and then repeat this step 10 times. Complete the exercise by cupping your hands over your eyes for a few seconds, letting them rest in the darkness.

Step 2. Look at something on the right. Keep your eyes on it and slowly turn your head to the left as far as possible. Then do the same thing on the left. Repeat the exercise a couple of times.

Step 3. Hold your finger in front of your nose and keep looking at it. Slowly move the finger towards yourself as close as you can without losing focus (焦点). Then look outside the window as far as possible. Repeat this several times.

For years, psychologists (心理学家) have been against giving children prizes or money for theirperformance in school. "Outwards" prizes, theysay, can undermine the joy of learning for its owngood and can even lead to cheating.

But many economists(经济学家) and business people disagree, and their opinions often become popular in the educational marketplace. Prize programs that pay students are underway in many cities. In some places, students can bring home hundreds of dollars for, say, taking an Advanced Placement course and having high grades in the exams.

“Whether such efforts work continues to be a debate(争议),” said Barbara Marian, an assistant professor of education at Pennsylvania State. She is against using prizes as encouragement. Among parents, it often leads to very hot discussion. And in public education, a new focus on school reform(改革) pushes researchers on both sides of the debate to make more efforts to get data(数据) that may provide information on when and whether prizes work.

“We have to get beyond our biases (偏见),” said Roland Fryer, an economist at Harvard University who is planning and testing several prize programs. “Luckily, the scientific method allows us to examine most of those biases and let the data do the talking.” In the cash programs being studied, Roland Fryer and other economists compare the school performance of groups of students who are paid and students who are not. In the study, they find that the students who are prized get higher grades on the SAT and go to better colleges than those who are not.

However, many psychologists believe that early data can be one-sided. Research suggests that prizes may work in the short term but have bad influences in the long term.

“Are they highly interested in what they are doing? Or does it feel like hard work? The same prize program might have different influences on different kinds of students,” said Kirabo Jackson, a famous psychologist at Cornell University. “The higher the prize is, the more harmful the result might be.”

81. The underlined word “undermine” in Paragraph 1 most probably means “_____”.

A. understand B. examine C. kill D. protect

82. From Paragraph 2 and Paragraph 3, we can learn that _____.

- A. the students’ parents welcome prize programs
- B. prize programs are getting popular in many cities
- C. The government provides money for prize programs
- D. all the education researchers support prize programs

83. According to Roland Fryer and other economists’ study, students who are paid _____.

- A. have more scientific methods
- B. like to discuss with other students

C. always cheat in examinations D. have better performance at school

84. The passage mainly tells us _____.

A. how to use prizes to encourage the students

There are always people in your neighborhood who need help 61 some tasks, such as walking their dogs, looking after their kids, and carrying their heavy shopping bags. You can also volunteer by giving 62 to hospitals. These things may seem small, but they can still make a difference in someone else's life.

Volunteers don't 63 help people. Environmental volunteers work hard to protect the environment. They plant trees or 64 city parks. Other volunteers work for animal charities which save the homeless or injured (受伤的) animals. They feed the animals and show them love. They take care of the animals until they are 65 enough to be put in good homes.

All in all, volunteering is really a good way to make a contribution to your hometown and to the world.

Nowadays, we are having a much busier life, and we are using our eyes more than ever before. So we often have tired eyes after a day's work or study. Here are some good methods of protecting eyes against tiredness to keep them healthy.

POSTURE (坐姿)

Get into the habit of paying attention to the way you sit. Try to stick to the proper posture that doctors suggest.

HELPFUL PICTURES

There are some special pictures online that can help relax your eyes. You may download such pictures to your computer or smart phone. When there is nothing far away you can look at to relax your eyes, you can use one of these pictures. A picture with something like a tunnel (隧道) in it is quite popular. Try to look as far into the tunnel as you can for 30 seconds(秒). Do you feel better?

BREAKS

The 20-20-20 rule: take a break from the screen every 20 minutes for 20 seconds and look at something 20 feet (about 6 meters) away.

EYE EXERCISES

Step 1. Sitting comfortably, imagine there is a clock in front of you and turn your eyes up to 12 o'clock. Pause (停顿) for a second, and then lower your eyes to 6 o'clock. Pause again, and then repeat this step 10 times. Complete the exercise by cupping your hands over your eyes for a few seconds, letting them rest in the darkness.

Step 2. Look at something on the right, Keep your eyes on it and slowly turn your head to the left as far as possible. Then do the same thing on the left. Repeat the exercise a couple of times.

Step 3. Hold your finger in front of your nose and keep looking at it. Slowly move the finger towards yourself as close as you can without losing focus(焦点). Then look outside the window as far as possible. Repeat this several times.

SPORTS

Table tennis is about a small ball traveling at high speed-the best sport to train your eyes and relax the muscles(肌肉) in and around the eyes. Other sports like tennis, badminton and kite flying are also great for relaxing tired eyes.

76. Which of the following methods of protecting eyes is NOT mentioned in the passage?

For years, psychologists (心理学家) have been against giving children prizes or money for their performance in school. "Outwards" prizes, they say, can undermine the joy of learning for its own good and can even lead to cheating.

But many economists(经济学家) and business people disagree, and their opinions often become popular in the educational marketplace. Prize programs that pay students are underway in many cities. In some places, students can bring home hundreds of dollars for, say, taking an Advanced Placement course and having high grades in the exams.

"Whether such efforts work continues to be a debate(争议)," said Barbara Marian, an assistant professor of education at Pennsylvania State. She is against using prizes as encouragement. Among parents, it often leads to very hot discussion. And in public education, a new focus on school reform(改革) pushes researchers on both sides of the debate to make more efforts to get data(数据) that may provide information on when and where prizes work.

"We have to get beyond our biases (偏见)," said Roland Fryer, an economist at Harvard University who is planning and testing several prize programs. "Luckily, the scientific method allows us to examine most of those biases and let the data do the talking." In the cash programs being studied, Roland Fryer and other economists compare the school performance of groups of students who are paid and students who are not. In the study, they find that the students who are prized get higher grades on the SAT and go to better colleges than those who are not.

However, many psychologists believe that early data can be one-sided. Research suggests that prizes may work in the short term but have bad influences in the long term.

"Are they highly interested in what they are doing? Or does it feel like hard work? The same prize program might have different influences on different kinds of students," said Kirabo Jackson, a famous psychologist at Cornell University. "The higher the prize is, the more harmful the result might be."

【主旨大意】本文是一篇说明文。讲述了一名大学生石鹏，创办了一家网站为学前儿童和他们的家长服务

106. D 【解析】本句前后都是讲述石鹏的情况，所以这一句也是讲述石鹏的情况。故选 D.

107. F 【解析】后面说根据他的研究，前面肯定说的是做了一些研究。故选 F.

108. A 【解析】前面的句子说，所有的网站用户必须使用真名，后面肯定叙述原因，故选 A.

109. G 【解析】前一句说这个网站现在举办许多丰富多彩的网上活动，然后肯定说这些活会是什么内容。故选 G.

110. C 【解析】根据后面的内容，“他也同意，我们的社会需要更多的像石鹏的这种能解决儿童问题的有创意的想法。”说明前面是说这个网站的优点。故选 C.

XI.书面表达(10 分)

下图描述了李华今年春节得到压岁钱(lucky money)之后,他和父母对于如何花压岁钱产生的不同观点。请根据图片提示,用英语写一篇 100 词左右的短文。

要求: 1. 完整叙述图片内容。

2. 结合自己的实际陈述个人观点。

this Spring Festival, LiHua got some lucky money from his relatives. He was very happy and he wanted to buy something delicious and something to have fun. But his parents have different opinions about this. His mother wants him to buy books while his father wants him to help the poor students in the village.

In my opinion, I think both his mother and his father are right. It's hard to make a choice between them. I have a good idea . Lihua can use some money to buy some books, then he will get more knowledge and improve himself. As for the rest of the lucky money, he can show his kindness and give them away to the students. Then he w
